

Halberg No Exceptions Training for Primary Schools

A PLD course on adapting physical activity for primary and intermediate schools

The Halberg Disability Sport Foundation provides No Exceptions Training 'NET' a nationwide Professional Learning and Development (PLD) course for primary and intermediate schools on adapting sport, physical activity and recreation to ensure they can include physically disabled New Zealanders.

The Halberg NET is based on a model of best practice for providing physical activity in schools. The training enables teachers to deliver physical activity to all students across various physical abilities and skill sets.

The Halberg NET for primary schools is delivered by a local Halberg Disability Sport Adviser and consists of two one hour sessions:

NET Session One:

- A one hour introduction session with practical and theory elements
- Teaching the core fundamentals of adapting and modifying physical activity
- Investigates the need of the school/teachers to facilitate inclusion of physically disabled young people in sport and physical activity
- An action plan created by the teachers specific to their school

NET Session Two

- A one hour session continuing reinforcement of lessons learned and actions agreed in session one
- Furthering understanding of disability specific areas ie. applying the social model of disability in a sport or physical activity setting

Halberg NET resources and support includes:

- Access to online resources eg. activities, downloadable images and videos
- Evaluation process and review from Halberg Disability Sport Foundation
- Certificates of participation at completion of programme

At the conclusion of a NET teachers will have the skills, tools and confidence to deliver fully inclusive physical activities to all students to enhance their enjoyment and skill learning in the classroom and play ground.

The cost for a school to complete the NET course is $300 (includes GST) per school, regardless of the number of participants on the course. This covers the preparation, delivery, resources, post evaluation and access to our regional Disability Sport Advisers.
